a real corker

The organic earthiness of cork meets the unabashed glitz of metallic foil in Mazarin, a new wall covering by Innovations. Glimmering gold-line geometries set against a dark ground will surely bring panache to vertical surfaces. Cork is, of course, a sustainable option, too: natural, renewable, recyclable, and biodegradable. Green and glam? That's a winner. space 6-130

global entry

Got the travel bug? The new Nomad collection by Arc|Com has got you covered via fabrics that recast the design motifs associated with one of the world's oldest itinerant cultures, Moroccan Berbers. The collection of polyester blends—Journey, Quest, Venture, Wanderer—encompasses three jacquards and one velvet. The bottom line? Sumptuous mix-and-match textiles with high-performance specs. space 1194

quick-change artist

As the name would suggest, the Chameleon case goods and work-desk system is as adaptable as they come. Designed for Darran Furniture by Mark Müller, the oak storage units have an integrated power cavity at the rear that acts as a distribution channel for connectivity—no matter whether cabinets are stacked or oriented back-to-back. Suiting contemporary work styles, the filing cabinetry is minimal, while coordinating fixed or mobile acoustic room dividers are myriad—making it ever-so-easy to foster a little peace and quiet. space 10-167

"With the goal of making workers comfortable in a room, I got the idea of creating islands of coziness, each with a different function," product designer Jessica Engelhardt says. Her Reef modular seating system for Dauphin embodies that philosophy, its straight and radiused benches prompting infinite configurations ideal for informal meetings and co-worker chats, or, on the flip side, refuge: Optional acoustic and privacy walls can be deployed to carve out a much-needed hideaway in a bustling office. See page 8 for more. space 393

Quiet riot, indeed: The buzziest product category at this year's NeoCon is, arguably, acoustic solutions. Check out Carnegie's shapely entrant, Ceiling Baffles, on page 58. space 10-112

Let there be light. The DV504-Milo system encompasses sideboards with stands and wall units that hook onto wall-mount bars. The unusual and innovative bit is that said bars are backlit, imitating the horizon—the idea being that such an organic reference fosters a sense of wellbeing. Elements are available in bright colors, with or without doors, and can be positioned just about anywhere on the system or hung separately on the wall. Cable guards are also available in powder-coated, oxidized, or wood coverings.
